I have known Ken Quinn about 3 years; in that time I have been fortunate enough to call him a business partner, a confidant and most importantly a good friend.

One thing I find so unique about Ken is his uncanny ability to inspire without being smug. His broad range of experiences paired with a truly creative mind, tend to provoke deep thought. Further, Ken is the kind of person who prefers to share his knowledge. Conversations with Ken lean toward learning experiences, every time.

Ken is also the type of person others gravitate towards. He possesses the rare ability to lead without overbearing or alienating the people around him. Put simply, he is a window into which a whole world of ideas and thought can be realized. It is truly entertaining just to be in company with him.

It was great to work with Ken because of his propensity to bring thoughts formed outside the envelope back into the collaborative realm. Being a true innovator makes him one of those people you would like to have on your side while conquering new territory. The notion of trying to do everything better seems forefront in his business approach.

I have to say that Ken is my idea of a trustworthy and committed individual. He is the epitome of someone who has guts, determination, and a keen sense of adventure. I know the phrase "What if" holds a place of honor in that exceptional mind of his.
